Shaping Globalization!

As part of the international work of the Friedrich-Ebert-Stiftung, Dialogue on Globalization contributes worldwide to the debate on globalization and global governance. It is based on the premise that – through an inclusive and responsive global policy approach – globalization can be shaped into a direction that promotes peace, democracy and social justice.

The program draws intensely on the international network of the Friedrich-Ebert-Stiftung – a German non-profit institution committed to the principles of social democracy with offices, programs and partners in more than 100 countries.

Dialogue on Globalization addresses “movers and shakers” both in developing countries and in the industrialized parts of the world. The program is coordinated by the head office of the Friedrich-Ebert-Stiftung in Berlin and by the FES offices in New York and Geneva.

Berlin Head Office

The office works to promote North-South dialogue on a more democratic and socially just globalization process. With programs on core issues of global governance such as global security or the multilateral trade system, it contributes to a better understanding of the perspectives of the South among the German and European political public.

Geneva Office

The office works in cooperation with Geneva based international organizations on trade policy and the social dimension of globalization as well as on political, social and cultural human rights.

New York Office

Serving as a liaison to the UN in New York and the Bretton Woods Institutions in Washington, the NY office's program strengthens the voice of the Global South at these institutions with a focus on issues of economic and social development, collective security and global governance.

Publications and Websites

Different publication series form part of our activities to enhance understanding of the global policy agenda and support public debate on future policy directions. The "Occasional Papers" series offers in-depth analyses on evolving trends and key questions of global governance. "Briefing papers" provide policymakers, journalists and the general public with concise and competent background commentaries on issues of topical interest.

Dialogue on Globalization also presents "Voices of the South" – a monthly newsletter with articles by renowned journalists from Latin America, Asia, the Middle East and Africa. All publications can be downloaded from our website.

North-South Dialogue on Globalization

Dialogue on Globalization regularly organizes events on its key fields of interest. The exchange of experiences between stakeholders from the North and the South is a distinct trademark of its conferences, workshops and expert consultations – taking place in New York, Berlin, Geneva as well as in the countries of the South. With panel discussions and journalist programs Dialogue on Globalization also attends the major global events like the UN summits, the WTO Ministerial Rounds or the World Social Fora. Most of the activities are jointly planned and carried out with partners including international organizations, trade unions and NGOs.
